

THE TRIALS OF ST PAUL THE APOSTLE:

A Collection of Two Bronze Coins

These coins were issued by the two Roman governors mentioned in Acts of the Apostles: one who arrested St. Paul, and one who sent him to Rome for trial.

Other than Jesus Christ Himself, no other individual has had a more profound impact on Christianity than the Apostle Paul. After his famous conversion on the road to Damascus, Paul became a roving missionary of Jesus Christ, preaching the Good News throughout Asia Minor. His active conversion of Gentiles turned Christianity from an obscure Jewish cult into what is now the world's largest religion.

This remarkable collection features coins of the two Roman governors of Judea mentioned in Acts of the Apostles: Antonius Felix, who put Paul in prison; and Porcius Festus, who declared him insane and sent him to Rome, where Paul was executed.

These bronze prutahs circulated in Judaea from 52-62—roughly the span of Paul's various ministries. These were the coins used throughout the province at that time, and may well have been used by Paul himself.
